You are not alone.

Mental health is as important as physical health. How we feel, act, make choices, deal with stress and connect with others is all affected by our mental health. Anxiety, sadness and stress are normal feelings. But when continuing signs and symptoms cause frequent stress and affect your ability to function, a mental health concern may have become a mental illness.

Five potential signs of mental illness:9
- Personality change
- Anxiety, anger or moodiness
- Social withdrawal or isolation
- Risky behavior or lack of self-care
- Hopelessness or feeling overwhelmed

Texas Health and Human Services programs support people with mental illness and substance use disorders including:
- Education
- Crisis helplines
- Counseling
- Support groups
- Financial help
- and many others

The Behavioral Health Ombudsman

We can help

If you are having trouble getting behavioral health services, including care for mental health conditions and substance use disorders, we can help.

An ombudsman can:
- Answer your questions.
- Tell you about your rights.
- Help you resolve a complaint about behavioral health services received at a State Hospital or a community mental health center.
- Help if you have concerns about access to behavioral health care through your health insurance plan.

Call 800-252-8154
