What You Should Know

When you are exposed to a public health incident or the idea of a potential public health incident, you should know how these events can affect your personal health and well-being. During stressful times, it is imperative to monitor your physical and mental health. Learn to recognize the signs of stress and know when to implement healthy behaviors.

In times like the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak, it is easy to become overwhelmed. For up-to-date information, refer to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention:

Tips for the Public: Managing Your Stress

Know How to Relieve Stress

Keep Yourself Healthy:

- Eat healthy foods and drink water.
- Avoid excessive amounts of caffeine and alcohol.
- Do not use tobacco or illegal drugs.
- Get enough sleep and rest.
- Exercise.

Use Practical Ways to Relax:

- Relax your body often by doing what works for you — take deep breaths, stretch, meditate, engage in pleasurable hobbies, or something as simple as washing your face and hands.
- Pace yourself between stressful activities and do something fun after a hard task.
- Use time off to relax — eat a good meal, read, listen to music, take a bath or talk to family.
- Talk about your feelings to loved ones and friends.
- Limit exposure to media.

Pay Attention to Your Body, Feelings and Spirit:

- Recognize and heed early warning signs of stress.
- Recognize how your own past experiences affect your way of handling an event. Focus on the ways you handled previous stressful events well.
- Connect with your community support.

How to Help Children and Adolescents

- Provide a safe environment.
- Remain calm — children and adolescents will mimic your behavior.
- Keep normal routines.
- Share age-appropriate information.
- Prevent or limit media exposure.
- Practice active listening.
- Teach coping skills:
 - Slow breathing
 - Counting
 - Calming music
 - Soft pillows, blankets or stuffed animals
